

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
DISTRICT OF NEVADA

* * *

JOSE L. ECHAVARRIA,

Petitioner,

v.

RENEE BAKER, et al.,

Respondents.

Case No. 3:98-cv-00202-MMD-VPC

ORDER

I. INTRODUCTION

This action is a petition for a writ of habeas corpus by Jose L. Echavarria, a Nevada prisoner sentenced to death. There are before the Court a motion by respondents to dismiss Echavarria's second amended habeas corpus petition, as well as motions by Echavarria for leave to conduct discovery and for an evidentiary hearing. In this order, the Court resolves those three motions, granting respondents' motion to dismiss in part and denying it in part, and denying Echavarria's motions for leave to conduct discovery and for an evidentiary hearing.

II. BACKGROUND FACTS AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The following is the statement of facts and procedural history, as set forth by the Nevada Supreme Court in its 1992 opinion on the direct appeal of Echavarria and his co-defendant, Carlos Alfredo Gurry:

1 On the morning of June 25, 1990, Jose Lorrente Echavarria, 2 disguised as a woman and wearing a gauze pad on his cheek and a cast 3 or sling on his arm, entered a Las Vegas branch of the Security 4 PacificBank with the intention of robbing it. Echavarria previously had 5 surveyed the bank and determined that no security guards were employed 6 there. When Echavarria approached a bank teller and eventually pointed 7 a gun at her, the teller screamed and jumped back from the counter, 8 causing Echavarria to abandon his holdup attempt and start walking 9 towards the exit door of the bank.

10 FBI Special Agent John Bailey, who happened to be at the bank on 11 Bureau business at the time of the incident, inquired about the commotion.
12 Upon learning that Echavarria had pulled a gun on a bank teller, Bailey 13 turned to follow Echavarria, pulled out his gun, and yelled something akin 14 to "halt, this is the FBI." Echavarria turned, glanced at Bailey, and 15 continued to walk towards the exit. Bailey then fired a shot that shattered 16 the bank's glass front door. Echavarria stopped. Bailey grabbed the 17 gunman, held him against the wall, and ordered him to drop his gun, which 18 Echavarria eventually did.

19 Acting swiftly, Agent Bailey frisked Echavarria, requested that 20 someone call the FBI office, and asked a bank employee to retrieve his 21 handcuffs from his car. Bailey seated Echavarria in a chair while he waited 22 for the handcuffs. The bank employee returned with the cuffs, but before 23 Bailey could shackle Echavarria, he jumped out of the chair and collided 24 with Bailey. During the ensuing scuffle, Bailey fell to the ground and 25 Echavarria, retrieving his own gun, fired several shots at the downed 26 agent. Echavarria then ran from the bank. Bailey was transported to a 27 hospital, where he succumbed to three gunshot wounds.

28 The trial evidence supported the State's theory that after exiting the bank, Echavarria ran to his blue Firebird where the getaway driver, Carlos Alfredo Gurry, was waiting and the two sped away. A police officer who arrived at the crime scene shortly after Echavarria had fled discovered a motorcycle in the handicap parking space outside the bank. An investigation of the vehicle identification number on the motorcycle revealed Echavarria as the owner. A DMV check disclosed that the license plate attached to the motorcycle belonged to another vehicle. The rightful owner of the license plate identified Gurry as the person he had seen lurking around his motorcycle on two mornings shortly before the bank incident. Testing revealed Gurry's fingerprints on the stolen plate.

Information from a wallet which Bailey had removed from Echavarria during the frisk quickly led investigators to the apartment shared by Echavarria and Gurry. The license plate belonging to Echavarria's motorcycle and a screwdriver were found on the walkway in front of the apartment. Inside the apartment, clothes were strewn about the living room floor. In a dumpster outside the apartment police found a Security Pacific Bank Visa credit card application with both Echavarria's and Gurry's fingerprints on it, and a business card with C. Williams Costume Shop written on the back. When questioned, clerks at the costume shop remembered two Hispanic men who came into the store a few days before the attempted robbery and looked at afro wigs and arm casts, although they could not remember if the men purchased anything.

1 Gurry was arrested when he returned to his apartment the 2 afternoon of the incident. Initially, Gurry stated that he had been at a 3 friend's house working on a car since 9:00 a.m. Later, Gurry told the FBI 4 that he was scared and had lied about his first story. Gurry stated that he 5 had actually borrowed Echavarria's car on the morning of June 25, 1990, 6 to take care of an immigration problem and some errands, and that he 7 thereafter spent the remainder of the morning at the apartment. Gurry 8 reported that Echavarria, looking desperate, came into the apartment 9 about noon, changed clothes and left in a hurry. Gurry said that 10 Echavarria's behavior frightened him, so he called a friend to pick him up.
11 Gurry allegedly stayed about half an hour at the friend's house, then 12 returned home.

13 14 Meanwhile, Echavarria headed south in his blue Firebird, arriving at 15 the home of a former girlfriend in Juarez, Mexico, in the early morning of 16 June 26, 1990. Echavarria convinced the former girlfriend, Maria Garcia, 17 to give him six hundred dollars before leaving. Echavarria next contacted 18 Maria's brother, Jorge Garcia, for help. Jorge bought an airline ticket for 19 Echavarria and took him to the airport. At Echavarria's request, Jorge 20 also buried two guns and abandoned the blue Firebird along the highway.
21 [Footnote: The guns were later recovered by the Mexican authorities and 22 turned over to the FBI. One of the guns fired the bullets which killed Agent 23 Bailey. The other had been purchased by Gurry from a co-worker in late 24 May, 1990. The Firebird was also recovered and searched, revealing the 25 fingerprints of Echavarria and Gurry, and fragments of glass consistent 26 with the glass in the bank door.]

27 28 The Juarez police arrested Echavarria at the airport at about 8:30 p.m. on June 26, 1990. The next morning, Echavarria signed a written statement confessing to the murder of Agent Bailey. Echavarria was turned over to the FBI after his confession, and subsequently returned to the United States.

Echavarria and Gurry were each indicted on five counts: first-degree murder with the use of a deadly weapon, burglary, attempted robbery, escape and conspiracy. The State had to conduct a second grand jury to indict Gurry because the district court found that the evidence against Gurry in the first grand jury was insufficient and the prosecutor had misled the grand jury and failed to present exculpatory evidence.

Before trial, Echavarria moved to suppress his Juarez confession on the grounds that he had confessed after being subjected to physical torture and abuse while in the custody of the Mexican authorities. After a two-day evidentiary hearing, the motion was denied.

Trial commenced on March 15, 1991, and the guilt phase concluded with jury verdicts of guilty on all counts against Echavarria.
Gurry was found guilty of all counts except the escape charge, which the district court had dismissed for lack of evidence.

After the penalty phase of the trial, the jury found three aggravating circumstances relating to the murder committed by Echavarria and sentenced him to death. The jury found four mitigating circumstances in favor of Gurry and sentenced him to life in prison with the possibility of parole. [Footnote: Gurry received a second life term as a deadly weapon enhancement.] The district court also sentenced each appellant to additional prison time for the other felonies. Appellants' motion for a new trial was denied.

Echavarria v. State, 108 Nev. 734, 737-39, 839 P.2d 589, 591-93 (1992). The Nevada Supreme Court affirmed Echavarria's conviction and sentence. Id. The United States Supreme Court denied certiorari on May 17, 1993. Echavarria v. Nevada, 508 U.S. 914 (1993).

Echavarria then filed his first state-court habeas corpus petition, on July 28, 1995. Exhibit 119.¹ That petition was denied by the state district court in an order entered on November 7, 1995. Exhibit 122. Echavarria appealed. See Exhibits 127 (opening brief) and 129 (reply brief). The appeal was dismissed on December 20, 1996. Exhibit 130. Rehearing was denied on December 17, 1997. Exhibit 132.

Echavarria then initiated this federal habeas corpus action on April 17, 1998, by filing a pro se habeas petition (dkt. no. 1). On May 1, 1998, the court appointed counsel – the Federal Public Defender for the District of Nevada – to represent Echavarria (dkt. nos. 3, 8, 9). Extensive discovery proceedings ensued, with petitioner granted leave of court to conduct certain discovery (see, e.g., dkt. nos. 17, 47, 49, 68). On October 16, 2006, Echavarria filed a first amended habeas petition (dkt. nos. 107 and 108).

On March 26, 2007, upon an unopposed motion by Echavarria, the court stayed this case, to allow Echavarria to return to state court to exhaust his unexhausted claims (dkt. no. 118). The stay of this action was lifted on July 12, 2011, upon a motion by Echavarria, after the state-court proceedings had been completed (dkt. no. 133). On November 18, 2011, Echavarria filed a second amended petition for writ of habeas corpus (dkt. nos. 136 and 139).

Meanwhile, during the stay of this action Echavarria initiated two habeas corpus actions in state court. He initiated one of those – his second state-court habeas action – ¹In this order, exhibits identified only by exhibit number, without further designation ("Exhibit ____"), are located in the "State Court Record," filed by the respondents on March 1, 1999, in support of an opposition to a motion for leave to conduct discovery, which is found in the court's electronic filing system at dkt. no. 23.

1 on May 10, 2007, and that was denied by the state district court on January 8, 2008. He 2 initiated the other – his third state-court habeas action – on May 2, 2008, and that was 3 denied by the state district court on August 1, 2008. See Appellant’s Opening Brief, 4 Exhibit 1 to Motion to Vacate Stay and Reopen Capital Habeas Corpus Proceeding, p. 1, 5 lines 6-12 (dkt. no. 132-2, p. 14). Echavarria appealed from the denial of those two 6 petitions, and the appeals were consolidated. Id. On July 20, 2010, the Nevada 7 Supreme Court affirmed the denial of Echavarria’s second and third state-court habeas 8 petitions. Order of Affirmance, Exhibit 6 to Motion to Vacate Stay and Reopen Capital 9 Habeas Corpus Proceeding (dkt. no. 132-5, pp. 38-57). Rehearing was denied on 10 September 22, 2010. Order Denying Rehearing, Exhibit 8 to Motion to Vacate Stay and 11 Reopen Capital Habeas Corpus Proceeding (dkt. no. 132-5, pp. 67-69). The United 12 States Supreme Court denied certiorari on April 4, 2011. Exhibit 11 to Motion to Vacate 13 Stay and Reopen Capital Habeas Corpus Proceeding (dkt. no. 132-6, p. 17). The 14 Nevada Supreme Court issued its remittitur on May 17, 2011. Remittitur, Exhibit 12 to 15 Motion to Vacate Stay and Reopen Capital Habeas Corpus Proceeding (dkt. no. 132-6, p.
16 19).

17 On May 8, 2012, respondents filed their motion to dismiss Echavarria’s second 18 amended petition (dkt. no. 145). On September 9, 2012, Echavarria filed an opposition to 19 the motion to dismiss (dkt. no. 152), along with a motion for leave to conduct discovery 20 (dkt. no. 157) and a motion for evidentiary hearing (dkt. no. 158). On November 28, 21 2012, respondents filed a reply in support of their motion to dismiss (dkt. no. 166), an 22 opposition to the motion for leave to conduct discovery (dkt. no. 167), and an opposition 23 to the motion for evidentiary hearing (dkt. no. 168). On January 22, 2013, Echavarria 24 filed a reply in support of his motion for leave to conduct discovery (dkt. no. 172) and a 25 reply in support of his motion for evidentiary hearing (dkt. no. 173).

26 Respondents’ motion to dismiss, Echavarria’s motion for leave to conduct 27 discovery, and Echavarria’s motion for evidentiary hearing are before the Court.

28 ///

1 III. ECHAVARRIA'S SECOND AMENDED HABEAS PETITION

2 In his second amended habeas corpus petition, filed November 18, 2011 (dkt. nos.
3 136 and 139), Echavarria asserts fifteen claims for relief, as follows:

4 In Claim 1, Echavarria claims that his constitutional rights were denied because of 5 ineffective assistance of counsel. Second Amended Petition (dkt. no. 136, p. 9). Claim 1 6 is divided into subparts. In Claim 1A, Echavarria claims that trial counsel's investigation 7 of the crime scene was inadequate. Id. at 9-13. In Claim 1B, Echavarria claims that his 8 trial counsel conducted an inadequate mitigation investigation. Id. at 13-52.

9 In Claim 2, Echavarria claims that his constitutional rights were denied because 10 the aggravating factors, upon which his death penalty was based, were invalid. Id. at 53-11 58. In particular, Echavarria claims that the "aggravator, murder committed to avoid or 12 prevent a lawful arrest, is invalid and cannot be used to support the death penalty." Id. at 13 53.

14 In Claim 3, Echavarria claims that his constitutional rights were denied "due to the 15 trial court's failure to suppress Mr. Echavarria's statement given to the Mexican police 16 while being subjected to torture." Id. at 59.

17 In Claim 4, which is filed under seal (dkt. no. 139), Echavarria claims that his 18 constitutional rights were denied because of bias on the part of the trial judge.

19 In Claim 5, Echavarria claims that his constitutional rights were denied because 20 "the prosecutor exercised his peremptory challenges in a discriminatory manner and 21 appellate counsel ineffectively failed to raise this issue on direct appeal and state post-22 conviction." Id. at 65

23 In Claim 6, Echavarria claims that his constitutional rights were denied because 24 "the government withheld material, exculpatory evidence or, in the alternative, trial 25 counsel unreasonably and ineffectively failed to investigate and discover this evidence."
26 Id. at 70.

27 ///

28 ///

1 In Claim 7, Echavarria claims that his constitutional rights were denied because a 2 jury instruction “relieved the State of its burden of proof as to all the elements of first 3 degree murder.” Id. at 86.

4 In Claim 8, Echavarria claims that his constitutional rights were denied because 5 “the ‘officially sworn’ court interpreters interpreted inaccurately on matters critical to proof” 6 and because “[d]efense counsel rendered ineffective assistance at all stages of the 7 proceedings for failing to protect petitioner’s right to an accurate interpretation and to 8 preserve these issues for review.” Id. at 90.

9 In Claim 9, Echavarria claims that his constitutional rights were denied “because 10 the trial court denied trial counsel the opportunity to investigate allegations of juror 11 misconduct and trial counsel unreasonably failed to investigate those allegations.” Id. at 12 97.

13 In Claim 10, Echavarria claims that his constitutional rights were denied “because 14 the government presented evidence that it knew or should have known was false and 15 suppressed exculpatory evidence.” Id. at 107.

16 In Claim 11, Echavarria claims that his constitutional rights were denied because 17 of prosecutorial misconduct. Id. at 112-13.

18 In Claim 12, Echavarria claims that his “death sentence is invalid because the anti-19 sympathy instruction given at the penalty phase violated his federal constitutional right to 20 due process, equal protection, a reliable sentence, and effective assistance of counsel by 21 unconstitutionally limiting the jury’s ability to give effect to mitigating evidence.” Id. at 22 114.

23 In Claim 13, Echavarria claims that his constitutional rights were denied “because 24 the Nevada capital punishment system operates in an arbitrary and capricious manner.”
25 Id. at 116.

26 In Claim 14, Echavarria claims that his “death sentence is invalid under the state 27 and federal constitutional guarantees of due process, equal protection, and a reliable

28 ///

1 sentence because execution by lethal injection violates the constitutional prohibition 2 against cruel and unusual punishments.” Id. at 119.

3 In Claim 15, Echavarria claims that his “conviction and death sentence are invalid 4 under the [state and federal] constitutional guarantees of due process, equal protection, 5 effective assistance of counsel, a fair tribunal, an impartial jury, and a reliable sentence 6 due to the cumulative errors in the jury instructions, gross misconduct by government 7 officials and witnesses, and the systematic deprivation of Mr. Echavarria’s right to the 8 effective assistance of counsel.” Id. at 133.

9 IV. STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS

10 A. Legal Standards

11 Under the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996 (“AEDPA”), there 12 is a one-year statute of limitations applicable to federal habeas corpus petitions. The 13 statute provides:

14 (d)(1) A 1-year period of limitation shall apply to an application for a writ of 15 habeas corpus by a person in custody pursuant to the judgment of a State court. The limitation period shall run from the latest of – 16 (A) the date on which the judgment became final by the conclusion 17 of direct review or the expiration of the time for seeking such review;

18 (B) the date on which the impediment to filing an application 19 created by State action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States is removed, if the applicant was prevented from filing 20 by such State action;

21 (C) the date on which the constitutional right asserted was initially 22 recognized by the Supreme Court, if the right has been newly recognized by the Supreme Court and made retroactively applicable to cases on collateral review; or 23 (D) the date on which the factual predicate of the claim or claims 24 presented could have been discovered through the exercise of due diligence.

25 28 U.S.C. § 2244(d)(1)(A-D).

26 The habeas petitioner is entitled to statutory tolling of the limitations period while a 27 “properly filed application for State post-conviction or other collateral review with respect 28 to the pertinent judgment or claim is pending.” 28 U.S.C. § 2244(d)(2).

1 The AEDPA limitations period is also subject to equitable tolling. Holland v.
 2 Florida, ___ U.S. ___, 130 S.Ct. 2549, 2562, 177 L.Ed.2d 130, 145 (2010). A petitioner 3 may be entitled to equitable tolling if he can show “(1) that he has been pursuing his 4 rights diligently, and (2) that some extraordinary circumstance stood in his way’ and 5 prevented timely filing.” Holland, 130 S.Ct. at 2562 (quoting Pace v. DiGuglielmo, 544 6 U.S. 408, 418 (2005)).

7 Respondents argue that Claims 1, 5, 6, 7, 8, 10, 13, and 14 of Echavarria’s 8 second amended petition are barred by the statute of limitations and should be 9 dismissed.

10 B. Expiration of the One-Year Limitations Period

11 Echavarria’s conviction became final before AEDPA became effective on April 24, 12 1996. See Echavarria v. Nevada, 508 U.S. 914 (1993) (United States Supreme Court’s 13 denial of certiorari, following Echavarria’s direct appeal, on May 17 1993). For such a 14 petitioner, with a conviction that became final prior to the effective date of AEDPA, the 15 one-year limitations period for the petitioner’s federal habeas claims began to run, in the 16 absence of any applicable tolling, on the effective date of AEDPA, April 24, 1996. See 17 Patterson v. Stewart, 251 F.3d 1243, 1245-46 (9th Cir. 2001).²

18 When AEDPA went into effect on April 24, 1996, however, Echavarria had a 19 habeas petition pending in state court. Echavarria’s first state-court habeas petition was 20 denied by the state district court in an order entered November 7, 1995. Exhibit 122. His 21 appeal from that ruling was dismissed December 20, 1996 (see Exhibit 130), and 22 rehearing was denied December 17, 1997 (see Exhibit 132). Under 28 U.S.C. § 23 2244(d)(2), the AEDPA limitations period was tolled while Echavarria’s first state-court 24 habeas action was pending – that is, until the Nevada Supreme Court denied rehearing 25 on December 17, 1997. See White v. Klitzkie, 281 F.3d 920, 924-25 (9th Cir. 2002) (on 26 the question when statutory tolling, under section 2244(d)(2), ends).

27 _____ 28 ²There is no argument by Echavarria that any of the other triggering dates, in subsections (d)(1)(B), (C), or (D) of 28 U.S.C. § 2254, is applicable.

1 Echavarria filed his original habeas petition in this federal action on April 17, 1998 2 (dkt. no. 1). The claims in that petition, as well as claims in later amended petitions that 3 relate back to claims in that petition, were timely filed; respondents appear to concede as 4 much. On the other hand, Echavarria's first amended habeas petition, filed October 16, 5 2006 (dkt. nos. 107 and 108), and his second amended habeas petition, filed November 6 18, 2011 (dkt. nos. 136 and 139), were filed after the expiration of the limitations period, 7 and the claims in those amended petitions are barred by the statute of limitations, unless 8 the claims relate back to claims in the original petition, or unless there is equitable tolling.

9 C. Relation Back

10 Claims in an amended petition for writ of habeas corpus relate back to the original 11 petition, under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 15(c), if they arise out of "a common 'core 12 of operative facts' uniting the original and newly asserted claims." Mayle v. Felix, 545 13 U.S. 644, 659 (2005). "An amended habeas petition ... does not relate back ... when it 14 asserts a new ground for relief supported by facts that differ in both time and type from 15 those the original pleading set forth." Id. at 650.

16 Echavarria argues that Claim 7 of his second amended habeas petition relates 17 back to Claim 2 in his original 1998 petition. See Opposition to Motion to Dismiss (dkt.
18 no. 152), pp. 4-6. Claim 7 is Echavarria's claim that his constitutional rights were denied 19 because a jury instruction "relieved the State of its burden of proof as to all the elements 20 of first degree murder." Second Amended Petition, p. 86. In Claim 2 of Echavarria's 21 original 1998 petition, he claimed: "At the guilt phase of trial, the state trial court refused 22 to instruct the jury adequately on necessary elements of each of the theories of first 23 degree murder asserted by the state." Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus (dkt. no. 1), p.
24 13, lines 13-15. And, in Claim 2 of Echavarria's original 1998 petition, he also claimed:
25 "The court refused to give an instruction defining the deliberation element of first degree 26 premeditated and deliberated murder, and the instruction on premeditation and 27 deliberation erased any rational distinction between first and second degree murder." Id., 28 p. 13, lines 22-25. The Court finds that Claim 7 of the second amended petition and

1 Claim 2 of the original 1998 petition arise out of a common core of operative facts, and 2 Claim 7 relates back to the 1998 petition, within the meaning of Rule 15(c) and the 3 Supreme Court's Mayle decision. Claim 7, therefore, is not barred by the statute of 4 limitations.

5 Echavarria does not, however, make any argument that any of Claims 1, 5, 6, 8, 6 10, 13, or 14 relates back to his original 1998 petition, within the meaning of Rule 15(c) 7 and Mayle. See Opposition to Motion to Dismiss, pp. 4-6. Moreover, the Court has 8 examined those claims, and has compared them to the claims in the original 1998 9 petition, and the Court finds that they do not relate back to any claims in the 1998 10 petition.

11 Claims 1, 5, 6, 8, 10, 13, and 14 of the second amended petition were therefore 12 filed outside the applicable one-year limitations period, and, absent equitable tolling, are 13 barred by the statute of limitations.

14 D. Equitable Tolling

15 Echavarria argues that he is entitled to equitable tolling of the statute of limitations 16 because the "proceedings leading up to the filing of the amended petition in 2006 were 17 conducted under the supervision of this Court and in conformity with the Standard Orders 18 adopted by the Court for the conduct of habeas corpus proceedings in capital cases." 19 Opposition to Motion to Dismiss, p. 6, lines 24-27. As the Court understands 20 Echavarria's argument, he asserts that during the time his counsel did investigation and 21 conducted discovery with the intention of eventually amending his petition, because 22 counsel did so "under the supervision" of the court and in conformance with the court's 23 scheduling orders, he should not be subject to the operation of the statute of limitations.
24 Echavarria appears to argue that he was somehow misled to believe that his amendment 25 of the petition, whenever accomplished, would automatically be in compliance with the 26 statute of limitations.

27 Equitable tolling is warranted only if a petitioner shows "(1) that he has been 28 pursuing his rights diligently, and (2) that some extraordinary circumstance stood in his

1 way and prevented timely filing.” Holland, 130 S.Ct. at 2562 (internal quotation marks
2 omitted); see also Ramirez v. Yates, 571 F.3d 993, 997 (9th Cir. 2009) (“The petitioner 3 must additionally show that the extraordinary circumstances were the cause of his 4 untimeliness . . . and that the extraordinary circumstances made it impossible to file a 5 petition on time.” (internal quotations, citations, and alteration omitted)). “The high 6 threshold of extraordinary circumstances is necessary ‘lest the exceptions swallow the 7 rule.’” Lahey v. Hickman, 633 F.3d 782, 786 (9th Cir. 2011), quoting Mendoza v. Carey, 8 449 F.3d 1065, 1068 (9th Cir. 2006).

9 Taking as true all the factual allegations made by Echavarria in opposition to the 10 motion to dismiss, the Court finds that Echavarria fails to make a showing on either prong 11 – that an extraordinary circumstance stood in the way of the filing of his amended 12 petition, or that he pursued his rights diligently.

13 Instructions from a court do not serve as a basis for equitable tolling unless the 14 court “affirmatively misled” the petitioner. Ford v. Piller, 590 F.3d 782, 786-87 (9th Cir.
15 2009). There is no showing by Echavarria that he was affirmatively misled by the court.
16 The court’s orders during the time in question granted leave for Echavarria to conduct 17 discovery, set time limits for Echavarria to do investigation and conduct discovery, and 18 set time limits for Echavarria to file an amended petition; those orders were not meant to, 19 and plainly did not purport to, make any statement about, or have any bearing on, the 20 operation of the statute of limitations. Echavarria has not made any factual allegation, or 21 proffered any evidence, suggesting otherwise.

22 Moreover, to the extent that Echavarria’s counsel now argue that equitable tolling 23 must be granted because of their own failure to recognize that their delay from 1998 to 24 2006 in filing the first amended petition would run afoul of the statute of limitations (see 25 Opposition to Motion to Dismiss, pp. 20-21), that argument is without merit. A petitioner 26 is not entitled to equitable tolling when his untimeliness is attributable to his own 27 “oversight, miscalculation or negligence.” Waldron-Ramsey v. Pacholke, 556 F.3d 1008, 28 1011 (9th Cir. 2009) (internal quotations, citation, and alteration omitted). And, a

1 petitioner is not entitled to equitable tolling where the cause of his late filing is incorrect 2 advice from counsel. Frye v. Hickman, 273 F.3d 1144, 1146 (9th Cir. 2001) (“We 3 conclude that the miscalculation of the limitations period by . . . counsel and his 4 negligence in general do not constitute extraordinary circumstances sufficient to warrant 5 equitable tolling.”). There is no indication in this case of the sort of “egregious 6 misconduct” on the part of counsel, with regard to the running of the statute of limitations, 7 that could warrant equitable tolling. See Spitsyn v. Moore, 345 F.3d 796, 800-02 (9th Cir.
8 2003) (equitable tolling warranted where attorney retained to prepare and file habeas 9 petition, failed to do so, and disregarded requests to return files until well after the date 10 the petition was due).

11 Neither the court’s supervision or scheduling orders, nor the performance of 12 Echavarria’s counsel, was an extraordinary circumstance that prevented timely filing of 13 Echavarria’s amended petition.

14 Furthermore, in the Court’s view, the record shows that Echavarria did not act 15 diligently in filing the amended petition. The United States Supreme Court issued Mayle 16 v. Felix, 545 U.S. 644 (2005), on June 23, 2005. In Mayle, the Court held that an 17 amended habeas petition does not relate back when it asserts a new ground for relief 18 supported by facts that differ in both time and type from those set forth in the original 19 pleading. Mayle, 545 U.S. at 650. However, despite the obvious import of the 20 Mayle decision, Echavarria still did not file his first amended habeas petition until October 21 16, 2006, which was more than fifteen (15) months after Mayle was decided. That period 22 of time, in itself, is in excess of the one-year limitations period applicable under 28 U.S.C.
23 § 2244(d). In the Court’s view, the delay by Echavarria after Mayle was decided 24 evidences a lack of diligence.

25 Taking the factual allegations in his opposition to the motion to dismiss as true, 26 Echavarria has not shown that any extraordinary circumstance stood in his way and 27 prevented timely filing of his first amended petition, and he has not shown that he has 28 ///

1 pursued his rights diligently. See Holland, 130 S.Ct. at 2562. Equitable tolling is not 2 warranted.

3 In his motion for evidentiary hearing, Echavarria requests an evidentiary hearing 4 “to establish that he is entitled to equitable tolling to overcome the state’s assertion of a 5 statute of limitations defense.” Motion for an Evidentiary Hearing (dkt. no. 158, p. 3, lines 6 13-14).

7 Because Echavarria seeks an evidentiary hearing on a procedural issue, the 8 restrictions imposed by 28 U.S.C. § 2254(e)(2) do not necessarily apply to his request.
9 Even so, in order to be entitled to an evidentiary hearing, Echavarria must allege facts 10 which, if true, would entitle him to relief. See, e.g., Mendoza v. Carey, 449 F.3d 1065, 11 1071 (9th Cir.2006). “If the record refutes the applicant’s factual allegations or otherwise 12 precludes habeas relief, a district court is not required to hold an evidentiary hearing.” 13 West v. Ryan, 608 F.3d 477, 485 (9th Cir. 2010) (internal quotations omitted). In 14 analyzing Echavarria’s argument that he should be granted equitable tolling, the Court 15 accepts his allegations, and the evidence he has proffered, at face value, and 16 nonetheless determines that equitable tolling is unwarranted. Thus, the Court declines to 17 grant Echavarria an evidentiary hearing on the issue of equitable tolling.

18 Claims 1, 5, 6, 8, 10, 13, and 14³ of Echavarria’s second amended petition are 19 therefore barred by the statute of limitations, and subject to dismissal on that ground.

20 V. PROCEDURAL DEFAULT

21 A. Legal Standards

22 In Coleman v. Thompson, the Supreme Court held that a state prisoner’s failure to 23 comply with the state’s procedural requirements in presenting his claims is barred from 24 obtaining a writ of habeas corpus in federal court by the adequate and independent state 25 ground doctrine. Coleman v. Thompson, 501 U.S. 722, 731–32 (1991) (“Just as in those 26

27 ³As Claim 14 is dismissed on statute of limitations grounds, the Court declines to 28 reach the question of the cognizability and ripeness of that claim. See Motion to Dismiss, p. 18; Reply in Support of Motion to Dismiss, pp. 32-34.

1 cases in which a state prisoner fails to exhaust state remedies, a habeas petitioner who 2 has failed to meet the State's procedural requirements for presenting his federal claims 3 has deprived the state courts of an opportunity to address those claims in the first 4 instance"). Where such a procedural default constitutes an adequate and independent 5 state ground for denial of habeas corpus, the default may be excused only if "a 6 constitutional violation has probably resulted in the conviction of one who is actually 7 innocent," or if the prisoner demonstrates cause for the default and prejudice resulting 8 from it. Murray v. Carrier, 477 U.S. 478, 496 (1986).

9 To demonstrate cause for a procedural default, the petitioner must "show that 10 some objective factor external to the defense impeded" his efforts to comply with the 11 state procedural rule. Murray, 477 U.S. at 488. For cause to exist, the external 12 impediment must have prevented the petitioner from raising the claim. See McCleskey v.
 13 Zant, 499 U.S. 467, 497 (1991). With respect to the prejudice prong, the petitioner bears 14 "the burden of showing not merely that the errors [complained of] constituted a possibility 15 of prejudice, but that they worked to his actual and substantial disadvantage, infecting his 16 entire [proceeding] with errors of constitutional dimension." White v. Lewis, 874 F.2d 17 599, 603 (9th Cir. 1989), citing United States v. Frady, 456 U.S. 152, 170 (1982).

18 In their motion to dismiss, respondents assert that Claims 1, 2, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, and 19 15 of Echavarria's second amended petition are procedurally defaulted and should be 20 dismissed on that ground.

21 B. The Procedural Default

22 In his second state-court habeas petition, Echavarria "presented all of the claims in 23 his amended federal petition, albeit in a slightly different order." Motion to Dismiss, p. 9, 24 lines 21-22. On the appeal from the denial of that petition, the Nevada Supreme Court 25 affirmed, finding that the state district court properly "[denied] his claims of ineffective 26 assistance of trial, appellate, and post-conviction counsel as procedurally barred," under 27 Nevada Revised Statutes ("NRS") § 34.726 (statute of limitations), § 34.800 (laches), and 28 ///

1 § 34.810 (successive petitions). Order of Affirmance, Exhibit 6 to Motion to Vacate Stay 2 and Reopen Capital Habeas Corpus Proceeding (dkt. no. 132-5, pp. 38-57, pp. 2-11).

3 Respondents' position in their motion to dismiss, with respect to the procedural 4 default, is overbroad in three respects. First, with respect to Claims 1, 5, 6, 8, 9, and 10, 5 respondents argue that those claims, in their entirety, are procedurally defaulted.
6 However, the Nevada Supreme Court's July 10, 2010, order indicates that only ineffective 7 assistance of counsel claims were procedurally barred. There is no mention in the order 8 of the Nevada Supreme Court that other sorts of claims asserted in Claims 1, 5, 6, 8, 9, 9 and 10 were considered procedurally barred.

10 Second, in Claim 2 Echavarria claims:

11 His death sentence is invalid under state and federal constitutional 12 guarantees of due process, equal protection, the prohibition against 13 double jeopardy, and a reliable sentence because the remaining aggravator, murder committed to avoid or prevent a lawful arrest, is invalid and cannot be used to support the death penalty.

14 Second Amended Petition, p. 53, lines 2-5. In the July 20, 2010, order, the Nevada 15 Supreme Court nowhere stated that any such claim was procedurally barred. In the 16 Nevada Supreme Court's order, the only discussion of this challenge by Echavarria to the 17 preventing-a-lawful-arrest aggravator appears in footnote 5, at page 15. There, the 18 Nevada Supreme Court rejected the challenge to the preventing-a-lawful-arrest 19 aggravator on the merits of that claim. Order of Affirmance, Exhibit 6 to Motion to Vacate 20 Stay and Reopen Capital Habeas Corpus Proceeding (dkt. no. 132-5, pp. 38-57, p. 15, 21 footnote 5). The Nevada Supreme Court's ruling on the challenge to the preventing-a-22 lawful-arrest aggravator was, in its entirety, as follows:

23 One theory that the State pursued for first-degree murder was that 24 Echavarria murdered Agent Bailey to prevent a lawful arrest or effectuate 25 an escape. He argues that, as a result, the preventing-a-lawful-arrest 26 aggravator based on the same conduct is invalid under McConnell 27 because it fails to genuinely narrow the class of defendants eligible for the 28 death penalty. However, this court rejected a similar challenge in Blake v.
State, 121 Nev. 779, 121 P.3d 567, 577 (2005). Therefore, the district court did not err by denying this claim.

///

1 Id. This discussion arose in the course of the cause and prejudice analysis of another 2 claim, Echavarria's claim challenging the burglary and robbery felony-murder 3 aggravators. Id. at 14-17. There is no indication in the order of the Nevada Supreme 4 Court, however, that the court considered the challenge to the preventing-a-lawful-arrest 5 aggravator to be procedurally barred. Claim 2 is not procedurally defaulted.

6 Third, respondents argue that Claim 15 of Echavarria's second amended petition 7 is procedurally defaulted. See Motion to Dismiss, pp. 15-18. Claim 15, however, is a 8 "cumulative error claim," stating, in its entirety, the following:

9 CLAIM FIFTEEN

10 Mr. Echavarria's conviction and death sentence are invalid under the 11 [state and federal] constitutional guarantees of due process, equal protection, 12 effective assistance of counsel, a fair tribunal, an impartial jury, and a reliable 13 sentence due to the cumulative errors in the jury instructions, gross misconduct by government officials and witnesses, and the systematic deprivation of Mr. Echavarria's right to the effective assistance of counsel.
U.S. Const. amends. V, VI, VIII, & XIV.

14 SUPPORTING FACTS

15 1. Each of the claims specified in this petition requires vacation 16 of the conviction or sentence. Mr. Echavarria incorporates each and every factual allegation contained in this petition as if fully set forth herein.

17 2. The cumulative effect of the errors demonstrated in this 18 petition deprived Mr. Echavarria of proceedings that were fundamentally 19 fair and resulted in a constitutionally unreliable sentence. Whether or not 20 any individual error requires the vacation of the judgment or sentence, the totality of these multiple errors and omissions resulted in substantial prejudice to Mr. Echavarria.

21 3. The State cannot show, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the 22 cumulative effect of these numerous constitutional errors was harmless 23 beyond a reasonable doubt; in the alternative, the totality of these constitutional violations substantially and injuriously affected the fairness of the proceedings and prejudiced Mr. Echavarria.

24 4. Mr. Echavarria is entitled to a new trial and a new sentencing proceeding.

25 5. Either the state should have produced or trial counsel should 26 have discovered and presented all that undersigned counsel has 27 presented here. Trial counsel were ineffective for not doing so. Mr.
Echavarria's conviction and death sentence cannot be allowed to stand.
28 Mr. Echavarria is entitled to relief in the form of a new trial and a new sentencing proceeding.

6. State direct appeal counsel and state post-conviction counsel were likewise ineffective for failing to raise and litigate the above-referenced meritorious issues on direct appeal or in state post-conviction when Mr. Echavarria had a right to effective assistance of counsel. There is no reasonable strategy, designed to effectuate Mr. Echavarria's best interests, for the failures of trial direct appeal and post-conviction counsel. Mr. Echavarria was prejudiced as a result of counsels' failures and he is entitled to relief.

Second Amended Petition, pp. 133-34. Claim 15 simply incorporates the entire second amended petition and makes the unstartling assertion that the cumulative effect of any constitutional errors must be considered. The scope of Claim 15 naturally will be affected by the dismissal of other claims on the ground of procedural default, or any other ground; however, to the extent that any other of Echavarria's claims survive the motion to dismiss, Claim 15 is not procedurally defaulted and not subject to dismissal.

In sum, then, this Court determines that the ineffective assistance of counsel claims in Claims 1, 5, 6, 8, 9 and 10 were held by the Nevada Supreme Court to be procedurally barred, and are subject to the procedural default doctrine in this federal habeas action.

C. Independence

Under the procedural default doctrine, federal courts will not review a question of federal law previously decided by a state court if the state court's decision rests on a state law ground that is independent of federal law and adequate to support the judgment. Coleman, 501 U.S. at 729. A state procedural default is independent unless it appears "to rest primarily on federal law or appears to be interwoven with federal law." Id. at 734; see also Park v. California, 202 F.3d 1146, 1152 (9th Cir. 2000). Also, if the state court's decision fails "to specify which claims were barred for which reasons," the ambiguity may serve to defeat the independence of the state procedural bar. Valerio v. Crawford, 306 F.3d 742, 775 (9th Cir. 2002); Koerner v. Grigas, 328 F.3d 1039, 1050 (9th Cir. 2003).

In response to the motion to dismiss, Echavarria asserts that "the procedural default rulings invoked by the state are not independent of federal law, because the

///

1 application of the default rules depended on the merits of the claims.” Opposition to 2 Motion to Dismiss, p. 21, lines 10-12. However, with respect to the ineffective assistance 3 of counsel claims in Claims 1, 5, 6, 8, 9 and 10, Echavarria’s argument in this regard is 4 without merit.

5 In the Nevada Supreme Court’s decision, there is no discussion at all of the merits 6 of the ineffective assistance of counsel claim in Claim 6. See Order of Affirmance, Exhibit 7 6 to Motion to Vacate Stay and Reopen Capital Habeas Corpus Proceeding (dkt. no. 132-8 5, pp. 38-57). The Court sees no basis at all for an assertion that the procedural bar of 9 that claim was not independent of the merits of the claim.

10 Further, with respect to Claims 1, 5, 8, 9, and 10, in the decision of the Nevada 11 Supreme Court, the discussion of the merits of those ineffective assistance of counsel 12 claims concerned only the question whether Echavarria showed prejudice, as part of the 13 cause and prejudice necessary to overcome the procedural bar of the claims. See id. at 14 4-11. When a state court determines that a state procedural bar applies, and then looks 15 at the merits of the federal constitutional claim purely for the purpose of determining 16 whether the petitioner can show cause and prejudice to overcome the procedural bar, the 17 state court’s application of the bar is not considered to be intertwined with the merits of 18 the federal claim such as to deprive the state procedural bar of its independence. See 19 Moran v. McDaniel, 80 F.3d 1261, 1269 (9th Cir.1996).

20 D. Adequacy

21 A state procedural rule is “adequate” if it is “clear, consistently applied, and well-22 established at the time of the petitioner’s purported default.” Calderon v. United States 23 Dist. Court (Bean), 96 F.3d 1126, 1129 (9th Cir. 1996) (citation and internal quotation 24 marks omitted); see also Ford v. Georgia, 498 U.S. 411, 424 (1991) (State procedural 25 rule adequate if “firmly established and regularly followed by the time as of which it is to 26 be applied.” (citation and internal quotation marks omitted)); Lambright v. Stewart, 241 27 F.3d 1201, 1203 (9th Cir.2001).

28 ///

1 In Bennett v. Mueller, 322 F.3d 573, 585-86 (9th Cir. 2003), the court of appeals 2 announced a burden-shifting test for analyzing adequacy. Under Bennett, the State 3 carries the initial burden of pleading “the existence of an independent and adequate state 4 procedural ground as an affirmative defense.” Id. at 586. The burden then shifts to the 5 petitioner “to place that defense in issue,” which the petitioner may do “by asserting 6 specific factual allegations that demonstrate the inadequacy of the state procedure, 7 including citation to authority demonstrating inconsistent application of the rule.” Id. If the 8 petitioner meets this burden, “the ultimate burden” of proving the adequacy of the 9 procedural rule rests with the State, which must demonstrate “that the state procedural 10 rule has been regularly and consistently applied in habeas actions.” Id.; see also King v.
11 Lamarque, 464 F.3d 963, 966-67 (9th Cir. 2006).

12 In this case, the respondents meet their initial burden under Bennett by asserting 13 that the Nevada Supreme Court’s application of NRS §§ 34.726, 34.800 and 34.810 to 14 claims in Echavarria’s second and third state-court habeas petitions constituted an 15 independent and adequate state procedural ground for denying relief.

16 In response, Echavarria challenges the adequacy of the Nevada procedural rules.

17 With respect to Echavarria’s alleged procedural default under NRS § 34.810 18 (successive petitions), the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has held that statute to be 19 inadequate to support the procedural default defense in federal court. Valerio v.
20 Crawford, 306 F.3d 742, 777-78 (9th Cir. 2002). Echavarria cites Valerio for that 21 proposition, and thereby satisfies his burden under Bennett regarding section 34.810. In 22 reply, respondents argue that Valerio is no longer good law, in light of the Supreme 23 Court’s holdings in Walker v. Martin, ___ U.S. ___, 131 S.Ct. 1120, 1130, 179 L.Ed.2d 62 24 (2011) (rule not automatically inadequate “upon a showing of seeming inconsistencies” 25 and that state court must be allowed discretion “to avoid the harsh results that sometimes 26 attend consistent application of an unyielding rule”), and Beard v. Kindler, 558 U.S. 53, 27 ___, 130 S.Ct. 612, 618, 175 L.Ed.2d 417 (2009) (“[A] discretionary rule can be ‘firmly 28 established’ and ‘regularly followed’ — even if the appropriate exercise of discretion may 1 permit consideration of a federal claim in some cases but not others.”). This Court does 2 not agree, however, that Walker and Kindler necessarily undermine Valerio. This Court 3 follows Valerio, and does not impose a procedural default of any of Echavarria’s claims 4 based on NRS 34.810.

5 With respect to NRS §§ 34.726 and 34.800, however, the Ninth Circuit Court of 6 Appeals has rejected the argument that the Nevada Supreme Court has inconsistently 7 applied those procedural bars. See Loveland v. Hatcher, 231 F.3d 640, 642-63 (9th Cir.
8 2000) (regarding NRS § 34.726, as of 1993); Moran v. McDaniel, 80 F.3d 1261, 1269-70 9 (9th Cir. 1996) (regarding NRS §§ 34.726 and 34.800, as of 1996). The Ninth Circuit 10 Court of Appeals has never ruled either NRS §§ 34.726 or 34.800 an inadequate state 11 procedural bar.

12 Echavarria argues, though, that the NRS §§ 34.726 and 34.800 procedural bars 13 are inadequate to bar federal review in his case. He cites, primarily, Middleton v.
14 Warden, 120 Nev. 664, 98 P.3d 694 (2004), and Rippo v. State, 122 Nev. 1086, 146 P.3d 15 279 (2006), as cases that he claims show that the Nevada courts do not consistently 16 apply NRS §§ 34.726 and 34.800.

17 In Middleton, after finding that the petitioner’s attorney had “repeatedly violated 18 [the] court’s orders and procedural deadlines” and submitted work product that was 19 “wholly substandard and unacceptable,” the Nevada Supreme Court remanded, ordering 20 that the petitioner be given another opportunity to litigate his post-conviction petition with 21 a new attorney. Middleton, 98 P.3d at 696-98. Echavarria appears to argue that, when 22 the Nevada Supreme Court remanded in Middleton, it would have been too late, under 23 NRS § 34.726, for the petitioner in that case to initiate a new state habeas action.
24 See Opposition to Motion to Dismiss, pp. 42-43. But that argument is meritless; there 25 was no applicable procedural bar in the case because the timely-initiated action was 26 remanded, and there was no need to initiate a new action.

27 Echavarria argues that in Rippo, after any new claim was barred by NRS §§ 28 34.726 and 34.800, the Nevada Supreme Court sua sponte raised an issue regarding a

1 jury instruction concerning the consideration of mitigating circumstances, and invited 2 briefing on the merits of that issue. See Opposition to Motion to Dismiss, pp. 41-42; see 3 also Exhibit 13 to Opposition to Motion to Dismiss (dkt. no. 153-2). But in Rippo — as in 4 Middleton — there was no discussion at all in the Nevada Supreme Court opinion about 5 either NRS §§ 34.726 or 34.800, and there is no indication anywhere that either of those 6 bars was considered to be even a potential issue.

7 Echavarria also cites the following cases, without any substantial discussion, as 8 examples of cases in which, he believes, the Nevada courts addressed the merits of 9 constitutional claims despite applicable procedural bars: Hill v. State, 114 Nev. 169, 953 10 P.2d 1077 (1998); Farmer v. State, No. 29120, November 20, 1997 Order Dismissing 11 Appeal, Exhibit 111 to Echavarria's First Amended Petition (dkt. no. 107-2, pp. 587-91); 12 Jones v. McDaniel, No. 39091, December 19, 2002, Order of Affirmance, Exhibit 117 to 13 Echavarria's First Amended Petition (dkt. no. 107-2, pp. 559-73); Milligan v. Warden, No.
14 37845, July 24, 2002 Order of Affirmance, Exhibit 123 to Echavarria's First Amended 15 Petition (dkt. no. 107-2, pp. 522-40). See Opposition to Motion to Dismiss, p. 43. The 16 Court, however, finds that these submissions by Echavarria do not remotely show NRS § 17 34.726 or § 34.800 to be other than clear, consistently applied, and well-established.

18 The Nevada courts' exercise of discretion in isolated cases does not necessarily 19 render procedural rules inadequate to support the procedural default defense in federal 20 court. See Walker, 131 S.Ct. at 1130 (rule not automatically inadequate "upon a showing 21 of seeming inconsistencies" and state court must be allowed discretion "to avoid the 22 harsh results that sometimes attend consistent application of an unyielding rule"); see 23 also Beard, 130 S.Ct. at 618 ("[A] discretionary rule can be 'firmly established' and 24 'regularly followed' — even if the appropriate exercise of discretion may permit 25 consideration of a federal claim in some cases but not others.").

26 The Court determines that Echavarria has not met his burden under Bennett, to 27 assert specific factual allegations demonstrating the inadequacy of the state procedural 28 rules in NRS § 34.726 and § 34.800.

1 In his motion for evidentiary hearing, Echavarria requests an evidentiary hearing 2 “on the adequacy of the procedural bars asserted by the State.” Motion for an Evidentiary 3 Hearing (dkt. no. 158, p. 7, lines 7-8). The Court determines, however, that an 4 evidentiary hearing is not warranted on the issue of adequacy, as Echavarria has not met 5 his burden under Bennett. The Court, therefore, declines to grant Echavarria an 6 evidentiary hearing on the issue of adequacy of the state procedural rules.

7 NRS § 34.726 and § 34.800 are adequate to support the procedural default 8 defense asserted by respondents.

9 E. Cause and Prejudice

10 Echavarria asserts that he can show cause and prejudice with respect to his 11 procedural default, such that federal habeas litigation of his claims should not be barred 12 by the procedural default doctrine. Opposition to Motion to Dismiss, pp. 23-38.

13 To demonstrate cause for a procedural default, the petitioner must “show that 14 some objective factor external to the defense impeded” his efforts to comply with the 15 state procedural rule. Murray, 477 U.S. at 488.

16 Echavarria, relying upon Martinez v. Ryan, ___ U.S. ___, 132 S.Ct. 1309, 182 17 L.Ed.2d 272 (2012), points to alleged ineffective assistance of counsel in his first state-18 court habeas action, as the cause of his procedural default. Opposition to Motion to 19 Dismiss, pp. 23-38.

20 In Martinez, the Supreme Court noted that it had previously held, in Coleman v.
 21 Thompson, 501 U.S. 722, 746–47 (1991), that “an attorney’s negligence in a 22 postconviction proceeding does not establish cause” to excuse procedural default.
 23 Martinez, 132 S.Ct. at 1319. The court in Martinez then “qualif[ied] Coleman by 24 recognizing a narrow exception: inadequate assistance of counsel at initial-review 25 collateral proceedings may establish cause for a prisoner’s procedural default of a claim 26 of ineffective assistance at trial.” Id. at 1315. The court described “initial-review collateral 27 proceedings” as “collateral proceedings which provide the first occasion to raise a claim 28 of ineffective assistance at trial.” Id.

1 Respondents argue that Martinez does not apply to ineffective assistance of 2 counsel claims in Nevada, because, while state-court habeas petitions are the preferred 3 and most common vehicle for raising such claims (see Pellegrini v. Nevada, 177 Nev.
4 860, 883, 34 P.3d 519, 534 (2001)), they are not the exclusive vehicle in Nevada.
5 Respondents point out that, in Nevada, claims of ineffective assistance of counsel may 6 be raised on direct appeal where “there has already been an evidentiary hearing or 7 where an evidentiary hearing would be unnecessary.” Id., citing Feazell v. State, 111 8 Nev. 1446, 1449, 906 P.2d 727, 729 (1995), and Mazzan v. State, 100 Nev. 74, 80, 675 9 P.2d 409, 413 (1984); see also Reply in Support of Motion to Dismiss, pp. 20-22 (dkt. no.
10 166). However, while respondents point out that some claims of ineffective assistance of 11 counsel can possibly be raised on direct appeal in Nevada, respondents do not show that 12 any of Echavarria’s defaulted claims could have been. With respect to the claims at 13 issue here – the ineffective assistance of counsel claims in Claims 1, 5, 6, 8, 9, and 10 of 14 Echavarria’s second amended habeas petition – Echavarria’s first state-court habeas 15 action was an initial-review collateral proceeding within the meaning of Martinez.

16 Respondents also argue that the sort of showing of cause allowed by Martinez is 17 not available to Echavarria because Echavarria’s claims of ineffective assistance of his 18 post-conviction counsel are, themselves, procedurally defaulted. See Reply in Support of 19 Motion to Dismiss, pp. 23-24 (dkt. no. 166). Respondents cite Edwards v. Carpenter, 529 20 U.S. 447 (2000), for the proposition that “a petitioner cannot present a claim of ineffective 21 assistance of counsel for the purpose of establishing cause to overcome a procedural 22 default if the ineffective assistance of counsel claim is itself procedurally defaulted.” 23 Reply in Support of Motion to Dismiss, p. 23 (dkt. no. 166). The holding in Martinez, 24 however, was based in equity, on the discretion of the federal courts in applying the 25 procedural default doctrine, and the Court held that the sort of ineffective assistance of 26 counsel that may function as cause for a procedural default need not be a viable 27 freestanding constitutional claim in its own right. See Martinez, 132 S.Ct. at 1315-19.
28 There is no language in Martinez indicating that ineffective assistance of post-conviction

1 counsel may only function as cause if the claim of ineffective assistance of post-2 conviction counsel, itself, is not procedurally defaulted. See Dickens v. Ryan, 688 F.3d 3 1054 (9th Cir. 2012) (holding that there is no requirement that a claim of ineffective 4 assistance of post-conviction counsel must be exhausted in state court before it may be 5 asserted as cause for the procedural default of an ineffective assistance of trial counsel 6 claim).

7 Nonetheless, the Court does not find Echavarria's assertion of ineffective 8 assistance of his counsel in his first state habeas action as cause for his procedural 9 default to be compelling. In Martinez, the petitioner's procedural default in his state post-10 conviction proceedings was based on an Arizona rule barring successive petitions; the 11 petitioner's procedural default was complete when counsel in the initial-review collateral 12 proceeding failed to raise certain claims in that state-court proceeding. See Martinez, 13 132 S.Ct. at 1314. The procedural default at issue in this case is different. Echavarria's 14 procedural default was based on the statute of limitations in NRS § 34.726 and the 15 laches rule in NRS § 34.800.⁴ The procedural default occurred because Echavarria 16 delayed for more than 13 years, after his direct appeal ended in January 1994, before he 17 initiated his second state habeas action in May 2007, and his third in May 2008. See 18 Order of Affirmance, Exhibit 6 to Motion to Vacate Stay and Reopen Capital Habeas 19 Corpus Proceeding (dkt. no. 132-5, pp. 38-57, p. 2). The counsel who represented 20 Echavarria in his first state habeas action represented Echavarria for only a relatively 21 small portion of the time during which the default occurred. Ineffective assistance of 22 Echavarria's first state post-conviction counsel did not necessarily prevent Echavarria 23 from complying with NRS § 34.726 and NRS § 34.800 with regard to the ineffective 24 assistance of counsel claims in Claims 1, 5, 6, 8, 9, and 10 of his second amended 25 habeas petition. In fact, in affirming the dismissal of Echavarria's procedurally barred 26

27 ⁴The procedural bar in state court was also based on NRS § 34.810, but, as is 28 discussed above, this Court does not rely on the procedural bar under section 34.810 in applying the procedural default doctrine, as it is not adequate.

claims, the Nevada Supreme Court relied on the 11-year delay, by Echavarria's second state post-conviction counsel, in claiming ineffective assistance on the part of his first state post-conviction counsel. See id. at 4 ("Echavarria waited 11 years after this court resolved his appeal from the denial of his first post-conviction petition to challenge post-conviction counsel's ineffectiveness. Other than his misinterpretation of Crump [v. Warden, 113 Nev. 293, 934 P.2d 247 (1997)], Echavarria offers no explanation for the delay."). In short, there is an insufficient causal connection between the alleged ineffective assistance of Echavarria's first post-conviction counsel and the procedural defaults at issue.

Echavarria requests an evidentiary hearing "on the issue of cause and prejudice." Motion for an Evidentiary Hearing (dkt. no. 158, p. 4, lines 12-13). However, because Echavarria's assertion of cause for the procedural default fails, fundamentally, as the result of an insufficient causal nexus between the performance of his first post-conviction counsel and his procedural defaults, an evidentiary hearing is not warranted on the issue of cause and prejudice. The Court, therefore, declines to grant Echavarria an evidentiary hearing on the issue of cause and prejudice.

The ineffective assistance of counsel claims in Claims 1, 5, 6, 8, 9 and 10 of Echavarria's second amended habeas petition are barred from litigation in this federal habeas action by the procedural default doctrine, and shall be dismissed on that ground.⁵

VI. CONCLUSION

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that respondents' Motion to Dismiss (dkt. no. 145) is GRANTED IN PART AND DENIED IN PART. The following claims in petitioner's second amended habeas corpus petition (dkt. no. 136) are dismissed: Claims 1, 5, 6, 8, 10, 13, 14, and the claims of ineffective assistance of counsel in Claim 9. In all other respects the motion to dismiss is DENIED.

⁵Claims 1, 5, 6, 8, and 10 are also subject to dismissal on statute of limitations grounds, as is discussed above. With respect to those claims, the procedural default is an alternative and additional ground for dismissal.

1 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that petitioner's Motion for Leave to Conduct 2 Discovery (dkt. no. 157) is DENIED.

3 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that petitioner's Motion for an Evidentiary Hearing 4 (dkt. no. 158) is DENIED.

5 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that respondents shall file an answer, responding to 6 the remaining claims in petitioner's second amended habeas corpus petition (dkt. no.
7 136) within ninety (90) days from the entry of this order.

8 9 DATED THIS 20th day of March 2013.

10 11 12 MIRANDA M. DU 13 UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24 25 26 27 28